The Pastor's Corner

This week our sermon series on love moves to our church. I love my church and I hope that you do as well. Yes, this wonderfully imperfect body of followers of Jesus Christ that meets here between 4th and 7th street. This is the place where God has led us to plug in, to connect and to become a part of this family of believers. FBC is 142 years old and has an amazing story. Those who have gone before us have literally laid the very footings of the buildings we meet in. Their walk with Jesus shaped the theological constructs and doctrinal perspectives that we hold dear. We are not a new church or a recent church plant, we are not a rebranded church; we are a downtown county seat First Baptist Church and so we will continue to be. We have remained in the biblical pathways that our predecessors started us down all those years ago. This Sunday we will walk through a brief history of our church, and we will share from the Bible what God has to say about our connection to such a place, and, if time allows, what our roles are as well. We are a people who love one another and strive to walk in unity as we seek to serve our Savior where He has placed us. See you Sunday.

A Note from the Youth Minister

In a recent newsletter, Pastor James briefly reminisced about his own beginnings at FBC Cassville. While I am far from the years of devotion to ministry that James has, my second year in the role of youth pastor is approaching. There isn't anything notably special about year two in any sort of position that I am aware of, but I thought I might share some thoughts as I reflect on the last two years.

The last two years have challenged me in my personal spiritual development more than any other time I can recall in my life. My time spent in the Bible, studying the word, has been so much deeper and intentional than at any other time in my life and I have learned so much. This is not a new experience for me. I have earned a master's degree in biology. I have gained a great amount of knowledge through my time as a student. However, taking that knowledge into the classroom and shifting from the student to the teacher has enormously increased my understanding of the content far beyond what I learned in my years of college. I have experienced the same thing with my understanding of God and the Bible as I have shifted to the role of teacher these past two years. Anyone who has ever had the opportunity to teach in any form or fashion has experienced this.

Currently, there is an emphasis on discipleship in the church. A disciple is a student of sorts. Every time you show up to church service or small group you are a student and you are fed information and you grow in knowledge. However, I urge everyone not to be content with the role of student indefinitely. Seek out an opportunity to be the teacher because this is the next part of growing and maturing spiritually. See the example Jesus set with his disciples. Over the course of their discipleship, Jesus would send them out to be teachers. A disciple is more than a student. A student might learn, but a disciple takes that knowledge and passes it on for the benefit of both the student and the teacher. We are called to be disciples, not students.
