The Pastor's Corner

This Sunday we come to two middle eastern customs that go largely unnoticed by western readers. These traditions are called “kezazah” and “sulha.” Both of these nonverbal elements take place at the end of the story and both have tremendous significance to the interpretation of the story, especially as the story relates to the older brother. I hope you can be here this week as we explore the story beneath the story! See you Sunday.

A Note from the Youth Minister

As I mentioned in our last business meeting notes, the youth ministry schedule operates alongside the school schedule. Therefore, with the end of the school year, I'll take a moment to reflect on the last year. Our first major event this last school year was the DNOW in the fall. I received many compliments about the band and the speaker who led our youth for the event from both adults and youth. I look forward to putting together another DNOW in the future. Second, we took a large group to Xtreme Winter in Branson. Xtreme Winter has been a regular trip for many years now, and this year we had the opportunity to take a much larger group. In the spring, we also took a large group to Winter Jam in Springfield. Reflecting on these three major events from last school year, one obvious observation is that I am seeing a lot of new faces that are not regulars in our weekly youth meetings but are joining us on these trips. The only credit I feel comfortable taking is simply signing up for our group and arranging transportation. I have been very impressed by our core youth group in their willingness to reach out to their school friends and get them involved in these events. I am also encouraged by the willingness of these invited youth to join our group. In the past year, we have seen growth in our numbers during our weekly youth meetings. Last Wednesday, we had 55 students at the park for our end-of-the-year cookout; and the week before that, we had 65 upstairs in the LOFT for a testimonial night.

Other than camp and a few mission trips that some of our youth have gotten plugged into, summer tends to be a slower time of year than the school year. This is the time when I have a chance to evaluate and plan for the next year. One thing that has already been on my mind is that I would like to see more adults get involved with our youth. I want to extend to the church an invitation to consider if God might want you to contribute to youth ministry. There are a variety of ways to contribute. If you think this might be something God is speaking to you about, I encourage you to reach out to me. Have a great summer.

Matt
